WHAT THEY DO AT RICHFIELD

Submitted by Village of Richfield Springs Historian Harriett Geywitz

They eat and drink and walk; They ride and dance and talk; They fish and hunt and sing;
And daily visit the Spring.

They bathe and sail on the lake; They slumber when others awake; They dress in fashion and style; And sit in the arbors
meanwhile.

They quaff the bright waters at night, And in social conclaves delight; They scowl if the beef steak is tough, But no matter they are sure of enough.

They tramp to the Lake House sometimes,
Or ride, which costs but a dime; They visit
the Park by the wood, Declaring the exercise
good.

They ramble o'er mountain and vale, And beneath the dark shadows regale; With appetites craving and fine, They rejoice at the hour to dine.

The venerable sires altogether,
Prognosticate daily the weather; In 'old sledge' they shuffle the cards, Or read the late products of bards.

The Wall Street quotations they learn,
Which frequently gives them concern; But the belles and beaux are attraction, And manically work to a fraction.

But sometimes result is a strife, As bachelors contemplate a wife. But the beautiful summer time brings, A very great crowd to the Springs.

The poem described some of the activities of 1886 in the Village of Richfield Springs. Aside from the entertainment and vacation-like atmosphere which existed during the summer season, there were also important events which helped to insure the existence of the area as a health resort and assure the long-lasting health and welfare of its citizens.

A correspondence from the New York Times in that year indicates the progress being made to improve the sanitary conditions and water quality of the village - something that was of utmost importance in maintaining the reputation of this resort.

of those of a year ago. The little hotels and the cottages, of course, fill up fast. About the first of July the tide begins to set quite heavily in this direction and New Yorkers, Brooklynites, Bostonians, and Philadelphians float in and anchor out of reach o fogs, storms and pestilence.

It requires a great deal of nerve for the people of a little village way up in the interior of the State to sink $20,000 out of sight in the ground. Yet this is what the residents of Richfield Springs have done within a couple of years. Some of them are partially paralyzed at the thought, and have not yet recovered enough to join with some others who were counted on to do the kicking against this 'new-fangled' idea. Public spirited men like Dr. Getman, J. S. Davenport, J. A. Storer, T. R. Proctor and Uriah Welch put their shoulders to the scheme and the gun-barrel system of drainage was adopted. Because it is out of sight, it is none the less effective. The investment already pays interest in the increased confidence of summer visitors. There was more shuddering when somebody suggested that Allen's Lake should be tapped and its pure spring water be brought down into the heart of the village. Some said it was 'a-tempting Providence' and others were certain it was 'putting on too many airs.' But the pipes went into the ground, the pumping engines were set to work, and the water now gushes in a way that would gladden forever the hearts of all occupants of the cities. There are perhaps little things to talk about but they do not possess a great deal of significance for the man in the big city who is anxious to send his family where they will have a healthy home as well as delightful country surroundings."

Prior to this, as the interest in the use of sulphur water for medicinal purposes became popular and the construction of cottages and hotels for the summer guests in addition to the homes and business places of the permanent residents, fresh water became a big concern that wasn't satisfied by home

DANGER

ZONE

Every year, accidental poisonings result in the deaths of too many young children. Often, everyday household cleaning products and chemicals are the cause. Take these steps to protect your child against accidental poisoning.

Poison Prevention Guidelines for Household and Chemical Products

- Keep chemicals and household products out of the sight and reach of children.
- Buy household products in child-resistant containers and keep products in their original packaging.
- Store food and household products in separate areas.
- Don't allow distractions to prevent you from being watchful when using household chemicals.
