Health Tip: Suicide is a serious public health concern. Knowing how to support someone who may be struggling can make a life-saving difference.

The National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) recommends the following five action steps to help someone at risk: Ask: Don't be afraid to ask directly, "Are you thinking about suicide?" Asking shows you care and opens the door to honest conversation.

Be There: Listen with compassion and without judgment. Your presence can help reduce feelings of isolation and hopelessness. Help Keep Them Safe: If they have a plan, help reduce access to lethal means such as firearms or medications.

Help Them Connect: Encourage them to reach out to the 988 Suicide & Crisis Lifeline, a mental health professional, or trusted support network.

Follow Up: Check in after the crisis. Continued contact can significantly reduce the risk of future attempts. To learn more, visit the NIMH's page on suicide prevention.

 Did you know?... Baked beans are not actually baked. In the U.K., the dish is usually stewed in sauce. On the other hand, canned baked beans are cooked through a steaming process. Bottom line? "Baked" beans are rarely ever baked.

 Thought for the Week: A bad attitude is like a flat tire. You can't go anywhere until you change it.
