Good Fellowship and Advice

Submitted by Village of Richfield Springs Historian Harriett Geywits

"Richfield, in all of its history, had never known such an evening; had never seen such a gathering; had never had such a spirit of good fellowship among so many men." This was the heading that started a description of the testimonial dinner that was given for the Hon. Allen J. Bloomfield in 1915.

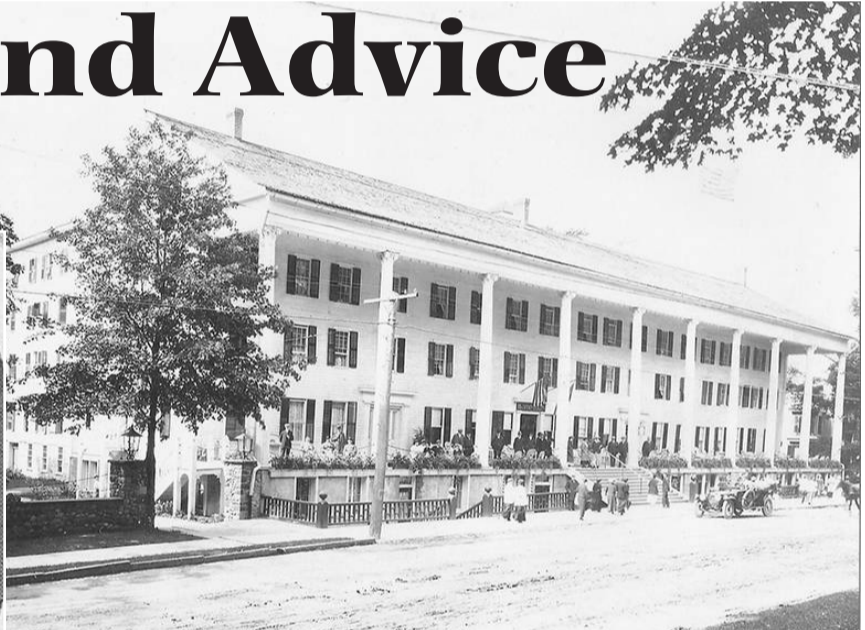

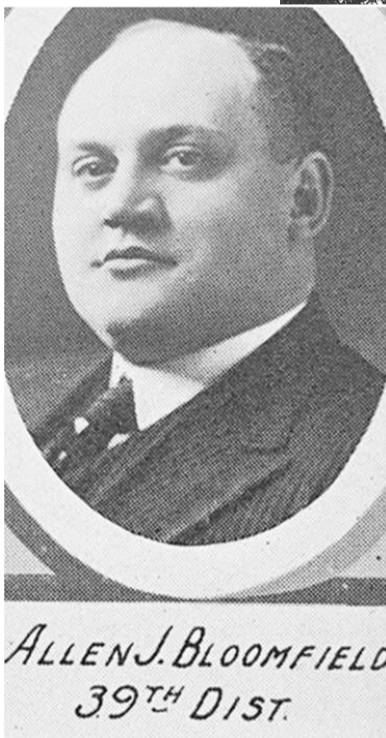

Born in Warren, NY in 1883, he attended local schools and graduated from Columbia College in 1904. While there, he had also been a stellar baseball player. Described as an enterprising and public spirited citizen, he proved the truth of that statement by serving locally as president of the Village, the library and the cemetery association. He was active in the Cherry Valley Turnpike Association and prominent in Masonic circles. Bloomfield served as State Assemblyman from 1915-1920 and Senator from 1921-1924. Unfortunately, he died in 1932 after an operation for a ruptured appendix. Always having an interest in the welfare of the area, he chose to take over one of the famous hotels at a time when changes in the economy and ways of the world had begun to make an impact on the number of visitors of the Springs.

"If the famous Hotel Earlington could come back to life and see itself as it now appears under the name of 'Bloomfield's', the old hotel would surely think it was passed on to a higher and cleaner plane. Bloomfield's has been cleaned from cellar to attic, nothing movable or stationary escaping. The home of the most particular housewife is no cleaner and no sweeter after the annual housecleaning than that was given this grand old structure and its contents. Many of the rooms and suites have been redecorated, all have been washed and cleaned. All the rugs and carpets have been taken up and cleaned, curtains have been washed and pressed, chairs cleaned, painted and varnished and over one hundred of them re-upholstered. The kitchen and other rooms at the rear of the building have been cleaned and readjusted with an eye to greater facility. All the cooking utensils have been refined. The ceiling of the dining room has been redecorated, adding a new and better tone to the room. The comfortable porch chairs have been repainted and re-gilded and their back cushions have been recovered. A new motor for the operation of the Otis electric elevator has been installed. New water pipes have replaced old and leaky ones and the steam heating apparatus has been renovated and placed in working order. All the stores in the Arcade have been rented. (N. E. Halaby carried imported goods; Mrs. Cook had an art shop featuring needlework and novelties; Mrs. Haussler had a hair dressing parlor.) The hotel will open in condition to give entire satisfaction to all who patronize it. With Mr. Bloomfield personally directing, there can be no question but that the standard of excellence in accommodation, service and cuisine will be high throughout the season."

What better way to acknowledge this occasion than a testimonial dinner given to the Hon. Bloomfield. The theme for the evening was 'Good Fellowship' and following a dinner enjoyed by three hundred and sixty men in the dining room at Bloomfield's, the speeches of several high-ranking men who attended from the Mohawk Valley, Central New York and the town and village of Richfield Springs, were given. The main speaker of the evening was Eugene Mabbett Travis, Comptroller of the State of New York. His words urged others to boost their own spirit; think better; act better; and work better for the good of their community.

"There is probably little that a resident of New York City can come here and tell you about the splendid qualities of your Assemblyman and your summer resort. It has long been my desire to visit here. Many years ago, my parents spent a summer in your village and told delightful stories of your hospitality, the restfulness of the place and of their pleasure in their summer vacation. This part of New York, the Empire State of the nation, stands in the lead as a progressive and enlightened civilization. Our forefathers made New York the best of all - made it stand for the best in every line. Let us pledge our loyalty to the state and, with renewed determination, set out to see that the laws are obeyed and that our conduct will be a model of citizenship. To keep in the first place, there are problems that must be solved and the support of all good citizens needs to be secured. We should conduct the public business with a liberality conducive to the growth of general business and yet with constant effort to secure economy of employment and of the time. You can all help to solve these problems and to meet these demands by giving your support to those men whom you believe are working wholeheartedly for the good of others.

Richfield Springs has for many years enjoyed an enviable reputation for fair dealing and honest treatment. Its fame as a restful summer resort has been widespread for generations. Whether the town has held its clientele and increased its business, you know best. It is for you to discover whether the measure of success that has been attained has not led to complacency. Just as in any enterprise - full cash drawers showing profits often lead to self-satisfaction and stagnation. That is what we must all keep watch against so that new opportunities do not get past us because we are satisfied with what we have. If we want to progress in any business, we must constantly renew our efforts. In these days it would be well to realize that there are other hustling centers of summer activity that are anxious to take from Richfield a promising future business.

We need a revival of our older friends and the younger men, like Bloomfield, coming together to start out again, with the fire of conquest, to put in the front ranks of the popular summer resorts of America your own home town. The building of railroads, the extension of highways, the popularity of automobiles, plus the ambition of new summer tourists, all spell the necessity to hustle to other places instead of the older communities where the people are settled in the places that are considered the best.

It is an axiom in business that you cannot make money without spending money. You must invest if you want dividends. I would suggest that you hit upon something which will give your town and individuality among summer resorts; something which will make Richfield a little different and a little more desirable than any other place. Do something original! I know there are brains enough at this gathering to accomplish it if you will only get to working hard enough. When you have hit upon the thing that is to make Richfield great among the villages of Central New York, to give it an individuality apart from the common run of summer resorts, be sure to let the outside world know what you have got. You must let your deeds shine. Make a business of regenerating Richfield. You must make the people of New York State and other states learn, through your efforts, that if they will come to Richfield they will add ten years to a normal life; that your springs are the real fountain of eternal youth and that the fragrant breezes of the Otsego County's fields will transform the furrow of age into the bloom of youth.

As I look into the earnest, intelligent faces, I think with confidence of the future of Richfield. Remember that despair never yielded a healthy fruit and that hope, confidence and courage form the fertile soil wherein grows success."

This is good advice to follow today as it was one hundred and nine years ago.

A Healthy Pet Is a Happy Pet.
 You love your pet, so make sure he stays safe and healthy all year round. How?
 • Take a note of your pet's behavior when healthy. This will make it much easier to recognize when your pet is acting strangely - a strong indication that he is sick.
 • Keep your pet's vaccinations up-to-date.
 • Don't leave pets unattended in the car, even with the windows down.
